HAND IN HAND.

WHERE YOU FIND ONE, YOU'LL FIND THE OTHER.

Health and Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy are boon companions; they travel together hand in hand, and where you find one you'll find the other. The countless testimonials received by the Doctor from sufferers who have been cured of the numerous diseases of the Kidneys, Bladder, Blood, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia and Female Weaknesses, is splendid proof of this fact.

Put some urine in a small glass and let it stand 24 hours; if it has a sediment; if it is pale or discolored, cloudy orropy; your kidneys and bladder are sick and there is no medicine in existence that has made such remarkable cures as Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. If you are doubtful, it will only cost you the price of a postal card to DISFEL THAT DOUBT.

It is a matter of absolute indifference to us how many physicians or specialists have prescribed for you without bringing you relief; write your full name and address on a postal card and send it to Dr. David Kennedy Corporation, Rondout, N. Y., and you will receive absolutely free a bottle of DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, of sufficient quantity to convince you of its rapid relieving powers, and that a continuation of its use will cure any disease of the Kidneys, Liver, Bladder and Blood.

From Memory's jar, the cover With reverent hands remove, Release from its vase the fragrance Of the withered flowers of Love. The lasting and clinging fragrance Of ripe petals that once by one Were yours and his dreams were roses. Ere youth and its dreams were done. O, the mystery of our loving! O, the joy without regret. O, the sweetest of memories! The saddest to forget. From the tender fragrant fingers When the pain has long since fled, Like the haunting touch of fingers Of our loved and cherished dead. And oft times we drop Life's burdens And hasten with footsteps fleet Away to our silent chamber. Of memories passing sweet. There to rest till the soul grows stronger, To rest till we gather courage To take up our load again. And then we place the casket, And seal down the precious lid, And leave in the soft, dim silence Heart's earnest wishes hid. Sweet with no drop of bitterness, Crushed, but no trace of pain. O, chamber of our fragrant fragrance, Full soon will return again. CORA M. W. GREENLEAF.

Dum Tacent, Clamant.

There's a sweet and varied language Of the flowers that bless our land, That ever in our summer walks We may read on every hand. While silent, they cry out— Express some fitting thought, Whether it be the pensive, heartsease, Or the sweet forget-me-not. Breathe in glorious splendor Sprung of love, and strong and true, The roses that undying story So old, yet ever new. The violet, shy and drooping, Scattered in tiny clinging groups Along the valleys deep. The orchid sweet and fragrant In the woodlands wild and free, Hides its petals in the fragile fronds Of the ferns so tenderly. "Incense of prayer," their perfume Even more sweet than the rose— Lingers a hint of the life of Heaven Wherever the orchid grows. Then the lilies, sweet and spotless. They do us all adore, Putting to shame all sordid thoughts, So beautiful and so pure, Tell of a life unsullied. By the lilies that lie in wait; Tell of a glory unsurpassed Beyond the Golden Gate. Sweet is water lilies, Fit emblem of the pure, And the lily of the valley Forever will endure. JENNIE E. SNOW KIMBALL.

Sugaring.

Old Style. Recently in the ADVERTISER there appeared an article about making maple sugar, which reminded the writer of the years he followed the same business, but with a different conception of the work. We used to have the same old cedar buckets, some big at the bottom, which when scattering, one could carry only four, one in each hand, and one under each arm. In some sugar places this was hard work, in others where the manager had said enough to get ready by breaking out the roads with oxen, the buckets could be carried about the grove so the scattering was done without so much labor. Tapping and hanging the buckets was more pleasure than work. This writer speaks of gathering sap in slumpy snow. Now in five years' actual experience and several more of observation I have seen this done but once or twice. The man who does not gather his sap on the crust early, does not know much about the business. The sap does not run unless there is a sharp freeze, with a warm day following, so the sap does not begin to run until the snow begins to soften, then there would not be time to gather and boil before the next run was ready. To get good results sap must be gathered and boiled down every day and every bucket should be gathered before noon, which by driving the team through the woods with the gathering tub makes the work comparatively light. Gathering sap with a yoke is hard work no one will deny, still to go out with two twenty quart pails hung to a good easy yoke, the crust hard and as easy to walk on as a sidewalk, the air keen and bright, the frost sparkling, the early birds singing, the early spring life starting at every hand fills one with about as keen a zest and enjoyment of life as anything I know of. When all is gathered in and boiled down ready for sugaring off, then talk of trouble and work, however much it may have been, is all forgotten. Think of the beautiful golden syrup boiling, sweet, bubbling with apparent fire to make it, carefully tended by the master, no amateur has any business there, the slightest mistake spoils the whole. When all is ready he calls "all ready, boys, it's aprons!" We rush with paddles and snow ready for "sheep skins," sap-bags, caps and, good! we have them to be seen and eaten to be appreciated. But they never are so good to those who have not begun at the first and seen the operation through to a finish. "The reward cometh to those who labor and are faithful!" Yes, sugaring is hard work but I know of nothing that carries so much keen enjoyment and ample reward as the old-time sugaring off. The pleasures will remember, the work we forget. WM. C. LEAVITT.

GRASS SEEDING.

Experience With Timothy and Clover In the Wheat—The Newer Plan. In many parts of the country last harvest it was found that the seeding of timothy and clover in the wheat had proved a failure, so that the wheat stubble showed but scanty promise for a hay crop next summer. Commenting upon this, W. F. McSparran says in Farm and Fireside: I have generally been successful in thus securing clover and timothy seeded in the wheat, the timothy in the fall, when the wheat is sown, the clover being sown in the spring. During the frozen period of winter I cover the wheat with a thin coat of manure, which settles well down around the wheat plants, stimulating their growth, and at the same time acting as a saving mulch to the little grass plants. After the wheat is harvested the stubble is not pastured, and the grass is generally given another light manure dressing. The mowing machine, with elevated bar, clips the weeds before they make seeds and by cutting back the grass or clover growth encourages root development and extension. By this method I have encouraged a most discouraging prospect into a fine harvest. I count that this is about all I may do under this system of making a hay crop. But even that sometimes comes into the realm of failure, so that I am gies the central part of the kernel toward the tip end. These different parts of the corn kernel can be readily recognized by merely dissecting a single kernel with a pocket-knife.

The horny layer, which usually constitutes about 65 per cent of the corn kernel, contains a large proportion of the total protein in the kernel.

The white, starchy part constitutes about 20 per cent of the whole kernel.

On the newer plan a small field from which wheat was harvested last summer and on which the fall sown timothy and spring sown clover were total failures was plowed after harvest and with harrow, roller and drag was made into a fine seed bed. About the 1st of August nine quarts each of timothy and clover mixed were sown, first lengthwise, then crosswise of the field. The sowing was followed by a light harrow, and the timothy and clover stand as thick and vigorous as is possible for them to grow.

Subsurface Packing. On fall plowing subsurface packing of the ground immediately after plowing gave forty-two pounds more wheat and 24 cents more profit per acre than were obtained from the check plots. On spring plowing similar results were obtained. It took a little less water to produce the crops on the land which was subsurface packed, and the soil contained a slightly higher percentage of moisture at the close of the season than was found in ordinary plowing. The subsurface packer is a heavy disk roller. The disks sink through the loose soil at the surface, tending to firm and pack the ground near the bottom of the furrow. This establishes a better capillary connection with the firm soil below, which tends to draw the water up into the surface soil, thus causing a more rapid decay of stubble and other matter turned under by the plow and hastening the germination of the seed and the early growth of crop. In all experiments the subsurface packer has given good results.—Professor Ten Eyck, Kansas.

A Safe Trapdoor. Trapdoors in barns and elsewhere have not infrequently been the source of serious accidents. An Ohio Farmer correspondent has designed a door with a view to preventing any such occurrences. As indicated in the cut, B is a plank door, A a piece of plank hinged to the partition and swing back out of the way when not in use. These come up against the battens of the door when it is raised and are hooked firmly to it. There is no danger of falling into this trap.

Seed Sprouting Device. A simple germinating apparatus can be made from two ordinary plates and a piece of flannel cloth. Fold the cloth and lay it in one plate, placing the seeds between folds of the cloth, which should be moist, but not dripping. Cover the whole with another plate inverted and stand in a warm place. If the test is made during cold weather, care must be taken to stand the plates where the temperature will not fall much below 50 degrees F. at night and will be about 65 or 70 degrees during the day-time.

Agricultural Notes. In a good many instances it appears to be highly favorable to clover to give the land a heavy dressing of lime. Locality undoubtedly has a decided influence upon potatoes. One good thing will come out of the scarcity of fuel—more attention will be given to the matter of setting out trees on the farm and preserving the forests of the country in other ways. Many prefer to cut back blackberry and raspberry bushes in the spring, after the extent of winter killing is determined. According to official report practically all the paris green on the New York market is pure. At the New York experiment station last season the Crescent strawberry led in yield, producing at the rate of 16,000 pounds of fruit to the acre.

Soft Core. Like the running brook, the red blood that flows through the veins has to come from somewhere. The springs of red blood are found in the soft core of the bones called the marrow and some say red blood also comes from the spleen. Healthy bone marrow and healthy spleen are full of fat. Scott's Emulsion makes new blood by feeding the bone marrow and the spleen with the richest of all fats, the pure cod liver oil. For pale school girls and invalids and for all whose blood is thin and pale, Scott's Emulsion is a pleasant and rich blood-making organ, but gives them strength to do their proper work.

about ready to abandon the old method of sowing the grass with the wheat. I have strengthened in my notion of dropping the old plan by my knowledge of the success of a new and much better method of frequently sown clover in one. I have frequently sown clover in the spring on well prepared land without a nurse crop and had most satisfactory results, but not until the second summer after sowing. Sometimes where the land was not too foul with weeds I have harvested a light crop of hay the same season as the seed was sown. But unless the soil and weather conditions are very favorable the first year's crop does not amount to much.

Death of James L. Parker.

A Well-Known Man Passes Away—Was Sheriff of Oxford County Four Years.

The death of ex-sheriff James L. Parker, which occurred at the home of Bart Littlefield, East Stoneham, Saturday morning, removes another man who was thoroughly well-known in this vicinity. He had been in poor health for several years from rheumatic troubles and got around with great difficulty.

Mr. Parker was born in Stoneham in January, 1831, and was consequently in his 72d year. In 1861 he went to the South with the 5th Maine Regiment as a soldier. After the war he lived awhile in West Virginia. He also resided for a period in Pennsylvania. He finally settled in his native town and was appointed a deputy sheriff. Mr. Parker was a conscientious official and faithful in the discharge of his duties.

He was several times a candidate for sheriff and at the Republican convention of 1890 he was nominated for that position. The vote was very close but he won by one majority. He was elected, and two years afterwards was re-nominated without opposition, and again elected.

Mr. Parker was always a strong temperance man and believed in the strict enforcement of the prohibitory law. For several years he resided on Paris Hill and had charge of the jail. After his second term expired he moved to Norway and made his home at the Elm Street for about eight years, when he returned to Stoneham. There he remained as a deputy sheriff, but after going to Stoneham failing health forced him to give up the position and he failed to qualify though appointed by the board.

Mr. Parker's wife was Eunice Merrill, who died while they were residents of Paris Hill. He never remarried. They never had any children, but they brought a boy, Ernest S. Bartlett, esq., who is a graduate of Bowdoin and at present is a special examiner in the United States Pension Department.

Mr. Parker was a member of the Knights Templar and other Masonic lodges, and also of the local lodge of Odd Fellows and Knights of Pythias.

He was one of the kindest hearted men that his friends would do anything to help him in his power to keep them out of difficulty. He has paid out hundreds of dollars in this way, that he never received any compensation for. No one was ever denied consolation and assistance in the hour of his affliction.

He thought the world of his nearest friends and particularly of Hon. Jonathan Bartlett and Judge Foster.

The funeral services were held Tuesday, being conducted by Rev. E. W. Poirer, and Mount Zion Lodge of Stoneham had charge of the services. Hiram Lodge, K. of P., performed escort duty.

He was carried into Dr. Sturdivant's office in an unconscious state and his wounds dressed before going to his boarding place. He is now doing well. The horse, which was one of Mr. Lord's valuable grays, was not harnessed again until Tuesday, when he left the stable on his run, leaving Dr. Meserve, at the first turn, and on the second turn, near Majr Hastings' dwelling, the horse and carriage both went down, rolling on the ground in a tangled state, especially the carriage. Letter to J. S. Marr.

NORWAY, MAINE.

Dear Sir: The cost of labor in painting a house is three times the cost of the paint. You seem to save a little when you buy a lower priced paint, but you certainly add to the cost of labor when you pay for spreading more gallons. You don't even save on the paint.

Devote Lead and Zinc costs a little more than mixed paints, but it takes fewer gallons, and the cost is actually less.

Wears longer too—longer than mixed paints, longer than lead and oil.

You don't save a cent.

Mr. C. Loch, a painter in Magnolia, Miss., writes:

After years of experiments with mixed paints, I find that your paint covers more surface to the gallon than any I have ever used. For density and wearing qualities it cannot be excelled.

Compared with lead and oil: A house belonging to the late President of the Crotton River Bank at Brewsters, N. Y., (cost $81,000) was painted with lead and oil in '84 at a cost of $400. In '87—three years—it was repainted with Devote at a cost of $850. In '97 the house was still all right.

Results: lead and oil—cost $400, wear three years; Devote—cost $850, wear ten years.

Yours truly,

F. W. DEVOTE & Co.,

Heald-Varney.

At 2:30 p. m., Wednesday, April 8, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. L. C. Varney of Sumner, her younger daughter, Lydia Jennie, was united in marriage to Washington Heald of North Buckfield, Rev. B. F. Turner officiating.

The decorations were in pink and green. The bride and groom stood under an arch of evergreen and ferns. She was gowned in a dress that did duty when her mother was united in the holy bonds of matrimony nearly fifty years ago. It was a changeable suit of pink and green colors very tastefully trimmed with panne velvet of a deeper shade of green the folds being joined by hand fagoting white crepe de chene, nail heads and white maline. The groom was in the regulation suit of black. The bride carried a shower bouquet of pinks and ferns tied with white ribbons.

The wedding march was played by Mrs. J. C. Morrill. After congratulations they repaired to the dining-room, where the table was tastefully decorated in pink and green. At each guest's plate was a small bouquet. The wedding lunch consisted of sandwiches, fancy crackers, cakes, nuts and confectionery, ice cream and punches. The tables were under the able supervision of Margaret Heald and Hattie Varney.

Among those present from out of town was Mrs. C. M. Bartlett of Haverhill, Mass., sister of the bride. The presents were beautiful and costly. Mr. and Mrs. Heald left amid a shower of old shoes and rice, and white ribbon decorations for their pleasant home in Buckfield.

Easter Hats.

Low and Flat Effects, with Endless Variety of Trimmings—Flowers Smaller, Fruit Larger than ever.

Norway's milliners, Mrs. V. W. Hills and Mrs. G. A. Allen had their Easter Millinery openings Friday and Saturday, of last week. The weather was fine and the openings were largely attended.

The windows were very tastefully trimmed. Mrs. Hills' was nearly all in white with here and there a dash of color in the millinery. There were only a few trimmed hats but they made up in beauty what they lacked in numbers.

A young girl clothed in pure white was just stepping through a half open gate. She was the real summer girl. On her head was a white hat with a chrysanthemum brim, aigrette and lace. The top of the gate formed an arch lettered with "Easter Opening." Inside the decorations were of countless cones hanging from streamers of white baby ribbon.

Mrs. Allen's decorations were of green and white. The green was the evergreen of our woodlands, and it gave a very springlike effect. The window carried out the same idea of decoration as the interior. "Easter Opening" was on the back of a music rack. The lady was dressed in white with a handsome white hat on her head. This was of chiffon, plumes, applique and flowers under the brim. Mrs. Allen had 110 trimmed hats and bonnets besides the ready-to-wear ones. Mrs. Hills had 170 trimmed hats and bonnets. All the hats were of the ready-to-wear. All the hats were trimmed in the work rooms of the establishment. Mrs. F. E. Drake head trimmer was assisted by Grace K. Nevers, Mrs. W. C. Garey and Mrs. Lena Greenwood.

Mrs. Allen was assisted during the opening in entertaining and showing the millinery to the many ladies who called by the head trimmer, Mae Grierson, and Blanche Groves.

Among the new shades offered this year are the champagne and blue, which is a bachelor button blue. Red hats will be worn and black and white, and separate and a combination will be stylish. The flowers this year will be of small design, the rose bud, forget-me-not, lilac and lily of the valley are being worn. Fruit will also be stylish. The trimming is of the flat order, the aigrettes all being arranged in front and the ribbon, chiffon and lace trimming hanging from the back as last season.

For children, large flat and wavy effects will be the thing, and there gives promise to be a number of large hats worn by every one this season. Bonnets are again regaining favor with the young women and the toque shape will come into use. Sailor shapes for every day wear will be as popular as last year.

One of the latest decorations in the millinery world is the tear drop spangle. One of the prettiest hats is with the tear drop spangles hanging down about the brim. A lady how the left side adds immensely to the effect. Red hats with poppy trimming are conspicuous this year. Ribbon is woven in with the straw in many of the hats. The shepherdess hat in a modified form is very becoming to ladies, and the projecting shape in front is very popular.

The berries grapes and fruit are larger than ever and a great deal worn. We saw a crab apple and some cherries life size. Monte Carlo daisies, marguerites and cowslips are the flowers that are much sought for also chrysanthemums. All flower and foliage hats beauties. The remaining shades are still used, and straw medallions. The straws are made up into hats in all kinds of fanciful ways and the plain straws that go around the hat are a rarity. Many of the brims have flower facings. Maline is used a great deal instead of chiffon.

The finest of the hats are made of different materials for the new straw, display bands of satin woven in. Many straws are nearly all chiffon. The Easter hats are mostly large, look heavy, but in reality are as light as a feather. Green and blue are also to be seen, but the shades are lighter than last year. The summer girl may wear a rose sailor hat. The round sailor should be trimmed with flowers. The rolling sailor or if it is worn should be trimmed with silk, decorated with quills that point forward in a warlike manner. The hats with a poppy brim bring to one's mind the poet. Indeed it is here only it is laid down the brim and floppy and the trimmings do the rest.

The finishing of the scarf ends is a matter which will engage attention more as the summer approaches, for the hat of this description, namely the one with the scarf ends, was far too becoming and too youth provoking to be forgotten in a season.

The flower gardens take this year a flowery form. Not content with a bright showing they demand the whole. A touch of pink and also of black or yellow in the garden.

Velvet ribbon is much used, and ribbon of all kinds has a tendency to be narrower than for the past seasons. The turban shapes, too, are "in." And in the turbans you find some of the most enjoyable things. There is a turban that is as round as a bowl, the crown is low and very circular and the brim is large but turned up so that it, also, is very round.

The turban shapes are variously trimmed, and here also, one sees the floral trimming carried to excess. The hat is entirely concealed under a bed of violet, with perhaps a little of velvet or of lace at the back, or the whole hat is covered with geraniums.

There are so many ways of trimming a turban. One can leave it quite plain, for it needs only a little roll of material inside the brim, or one can cover it with little folds of chiffon. Or one can twine an ostrich plume around the edge.

Help For Working Women

The suffering and pain endured by many working women is almost beyond belief.

How distressing to see a woman struggling to earn a livelihood, or perform her household duties when her back and head are aching! She is so tired she can hardly drag about, and every movement causes pain, the origin of which is quickly traced to some derangement of the female organism.

When the monthly periods are painful or irregular, when backaches and headaches drive out all ambition, when "I-can-hardly-drag-about" sensation attacks you, when you are "so-nervous-it-seems-as-if-you-would-fly," it is certain that some female derangement is fastening itself upon you. Do not let the disease make headway; write your symptoms to Mrs. Pinkham for her free advice, and begin at once the use of

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

Profit by the Experience of the Women Whose Letters Follow:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to write and thank you for all you have done for me. I have been suffering with womb and ovarian trouble for about four years and tried everything, but found no relief. I went to the best specialists in St. Paul, Minneapolis and Chicago. I thought at times I would go crazy, I suffered so. The doctors told me the only thing would be to have an operation and my ovaries taken out. I at last decided to quit the doctors and give Mrs. Pinkham's remedies a trial. I used both Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash, and now find myself completely cured. I had the doctor to make an examination and he said I was cured. I cannot say enough for what your remedies have done for me, and have advised all my friends to try it."—MRS. CLARA MALL, with N. P. & Nat. Express Co., Ashland, Wis.

Mrs. Frances Stafford, 243 East 114th Street, New York, N.Y., says:

"It affords me great pleasure to tell you of the benefit I have derived from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am now enjoying better health than I ever did. It seemed to me that I had no strength at all. I could hardly drag about. I was in pain all over. I began to feel better after taking the first dose, and am now like a new woman. I know that if other suffering women would only try it, it would help them."

Reminiscences of Vermont, No. 3.

I must tell you of a picnic the young folks had at Huckleberry Rocks. Don't you know if you ever desire a right good time, just invite a few college friends and a few of the boys and girls and it is laid down the brim and floppy and the trimmings do the rest.

For a wardrobe they had large barrels with hooks on the inside where they hung articles of wearing apparel. The finer clothing was neatly folded and put in crocheted sacks which were placed on hanging shelves at the top of the tent. In this tent was a writing desk, and a table of books and papers. A few days away was another tent occupied by two lady guests. In rainy weather, I asked, are you not troubled by excessive dampness? They showed us the extra covering over the roof of each tent which prevented the dampness from penetrating it.

After we made a tour of the different tents we were invited to partake of Russian tea and five o'clock tea after which we hurried home to avoid the shower which was threatening.

Near by was a camp occupied by some ladies from Washington, who were most entertaining. Their soft came later in the season. He has written a book which we had the pleasure of reading. Willough lake was not far away. It is quite a resort. The scenery is most picturesque.

Barton Landing was about one day's ride. Lake Umbagog is more than a day's ride. Many of our friends rode there for a few days' outing. We had a call from an eccentric old lady, who writes poetry which she sells to the visitors. Some of it was readable if you do not attempt to scan it.

Opposite our camp was a collection of houses or cottages, called the Burlington camp, as the people were originally from Burlington. There was a professor from one of the Maine colleges, a professor from Burlington University, a Reverend from a church in Ohio, also a pastor from Iowa. Every Sunday p. m., the people of that church would meet for a sing, and we could sit on our veranda and hear strains of "Nearer, My God, to Thee," "I Need Thee, Every Hour," and other of the Gospel hymns.

Every Sunday afternoon at our camp, the cottagers assembled and spent an hour in reading sacred hymns. There was no boating on Sunday by the cottagers. Of course, people who came from abroad would do as they pleased, and often spent the day in fishing and boating.

With one exception, there have been no accidents on the lake for years. The water is exceedingly clear and looks much purer than many lakes, owing to the fact that it is fed by mountain springs.

Writes Cheerfully.

Las Cruces, New Mexico, April 8, 1903.
THE NORWAY ADVERTISER:—I have received your paper and derived much pleasure from reading of friends in the old home towns, where my husband, J. Eugene Gary, spent his happy boyhood days, and where he died of the dread disease, consumption. Having contracted consumption myself, and being told by home physicians that change of climate was my only hope for life, I take the liberty to write you of the great benefit I have received by coming to this land of almost perpetual sunshine, that you may tell through your paper that there is a place in Uncle Sam's domain where consumption can be cured by good, wholesome dieting and living, where the sun shines nearly every day of the year. If the change is made while the patient is in the incipient stage, they can get well and return home; or, if too far advanced their life in this sunny clime.

I do not write this for the benefit of New Mexico but because I feel it my duty to let my New England brothers and sisters know what is in store for them if they will accept. I came here from my New England home, Dec. 16, 1902, and could not have been more satisfied today, they would feel satisfied with the progress I have made in overcoming the disease.

In Las Cruces there are many people who came here years ago helpless consumptive cases, but today are enjoying good health.

A CASE OF CONSCIENCE

[Original.]

Peter Cortright was going home one evening when, happening to glance at the foot of a tree box, between the box and the curb, partly hidden by a tuft of grass, he saw a package. Stooping, he picked it up, tore off a corner of the wrapper and uncovered something green and crisp. Looking about, he saw that no one observed him and, putting the package in his pocket, made straight for home. There he discovered that he had come into possession of $25,000 in bills. He rolled the package, tied it up and locked it in his bureau drawer.

There is a trait in humanity that leads people who have made a step upward to desire to take another. Cortright had no thought of investing the money and enjoying the interest. He was seized with the idea of using it to make a fortune. This was before the great boom in the stock market which began after the second election of President McKinley. Cortright made up his mind to take the longest chances with a view to reaping the largest profits. He selected five railroads whose securities were selling at the lowest figure and invested $5,000 in each of them, buying on 5 per cent margin, which enabled him to hold twenty times the market value of the securities. In the spring of 1901 he sold out and after getting in his checks from his brokers found that the $25,000 had become $800,000. Investing the amount in bonds, he received an annual interest of 5 per cent, or $40,000.

No sooner did Peter Cortright settle down to the enjoyment of this abundant income than he began to feel that he at least had no right to the $25,000 that he had found. It seemed a pity that his comfort and his pleasure should be interfered with by what now seemed so small an amount. He determined to advertise for the owner of the original bills and, if successful in finding him, return $25,000 with 6 per cent interest. He carefully worded a personal that would be understood by the owner should it meet his eye and awaited a reply.

It was such an advertisement as the owner of the bills had been looking for for years. It had been inserted only twice when Miss Esther Packard, a girl of twenty, called upon Cortright and informed him that on a certain day two years before she had been paid a legacy of $25,000. Going home with the money, she was followed by a man who, she feared, had seen her draw the money from the bank. She threw the package into the grass at the bottom of a tree box and passed on. She proved to have been mistaken as to the man's intentions and returned for her fortune, to find it gone. Cortright confirmed her story and gave her a check for $28,000, with which she was so much pleased and for which she was so grateful that she informed Mr. Cortright that he had no business on earth and should be numbered among the angels.

Had it not been for this extravagant laudation and the intensity of gratitude and admiration expressed in the girl's eyes Cortright might have enjoyed the three-quarters of a million left to him to his heart's content, but the disagreeable thought kept intruding upon him that he had been acting only as the girl's agent, she having supplied the capital and taken the risk which had produced the whole profit. To be called an angel for keeping these profits to himself was more than Cortright could bear. He tried to think out a plan for a division, but division meant explanation. Besides, he knew perfectly well that the girl was entitled to the whole amount less any commission she might see fit to allow him—that is, if she refrained from prosecuting him for retaining funds that did not belong to him. He brooded over the matter, lying awake at night and growing thin and haggard. The fact that weighed heaviest upon his mind was that he had been called an angel for a dishonest act.

One morning when Miss Packard received her mail she opened a very small envelope that contained a very large check. It was for more than $825,000 and was every cent that Cortright possessed. Accompanying it was a note stating that it was the profit of an investment of her money.

Miss Packard was dumfounded, bewildered. She had considered Mr. Cortright an angel. She now considered him an archangel. Not having any knowledge of business and being too emotional to see the dishonesty of Cortright's course in keeping and risking her fortune, she felt that if she kept the money she would be robbing the most conscientious of men. She proved her own honesty, if not her ability to judge of true morality, by sending the check right back to Cortright. With it she wrote a note that she could not think of accepting a fortune that he had made by his own brain power, especially as he had shown himself the noblest of nature's noblemen.

Her intentions were of the best, but she was heaping coals of fire on poor Cortright's head. As to his wonderful foresight, he had taken several "fliers" in Wall street for pure amusement since the great boom and had invariably lost. The girl by her own conscientious return of what really belonged to her had thrown a vivid light upon his dishonesty.

There was but one termination to a case where a man was worshiped for his supposed honesty and a girl was adored for her emotional ideal honesty. After many protestations from Miss Packard as to her unworthiness to be the wife of such a man she consented to marry Cortright.

THE MARCH WIND

O H, I'm happy when the bitter March wind blows. Though it puts a pinkish glitter On my nose.
For I know the merry twitter Of the robins in their glees. Soon shall open the day for me, And I know the sturdy crows Will be playing hocus pocus With the poets presently!

Oh, I hail the March winds gladly, Though they treat Maid and matron rather badly In the street! From the stables where they sadly Loiter now and ruminate, Growing fuzzy as they wait, All the lambs and colts and heifers Soon will rush to greet the zephyrs Swooping down across the state.

Oh, the March winds that go tearing In full swing, Ne'er respecting, never sparing, Anything. Start the grave professor swearing As they whisk his hat away! I behold their willful play While he madly hurries after. And my heart is filled with laughter Forty-seven times a day.

Oh, the March winds that come ripping O'er the seas, That go howling through the shipping At the quays, Have an angry way of nipping At the gentle maiden's nose, But in every blast that blows There's a promise for the lover And the faith that lifts the cover Where the dandelion grows. —S. E. Kiser in Chicago Record-Herald.

The Real Thing.

Napoleon was ruminating on Elba. "I wonder," he mused, "why they call me Corporal Violet."

"Probably," asserted the guard, "because they think you are the whole bunch."

"Right," exclaimed the emperor, "and that is why Louis XVIII. can't afford to pay for me."

Laughing at their expensive mistake, he fell to thinking how much cheaper it would have been to call him a daisy. —New York Herald.

Very Disturbing.

One evening Esther's sister put her hair up in curl papers. Esther, who is three years old, made no complaint until during the night her mamma found her sitting up in bed trying to take down her hair.

"What's the matter, Esther?" asked mamma. "Oh," complained the little girl, "these papers bother my pillow so I can't sleep!" —Little Chronicle.

I procured Doan's Kidney Pills at John Berry's drug store, under Hotel Thatcher, and the satisfactory results obtained warrants me in making the above statement."

Jacob F. Holt.

Jacob F. Holt, who has had a lung and stomach trouble for more than a year, passed away on Saturday night, the 4th. He was cheerful to the last and was out doors and at the barn two days before he died. He will be very much missed in the neighborhood as he was a favorite. He spent some six months last year at a sanitarium in Massachusetts, gaining in flesh while there but growing weaker and has been going down ever since.

The funeral was on Tuesday afternoon, the 7th. Chosen words were spoken by Rev. B. S. Rideout from the village. Mary Abbott Holt, a sister of the deceased, and aunt, Sarah Holt, came from Boston.

The bearers were Arthur Herriek, Oliver Buck, Arthur Messervy and Allie Buck. The casket was white and covered with fine flowers consisting of a spray of pinks, one for each year of his age (25), Augustus French; daffodils, Mrs. E. H. Norbend, Swampscot, Mass.; wreath of flowers and smilax, bouquets of pinks, calla lilies, coleus and white tulips, Endeavor Society and friends; white pinks and smilax, E. L. K. M. and B. B. A Fish Story.

Ralph Morrill and Will Allen spent a day at Worthly pond. They returned without even a fish story. That reminds me. A resident of this town, now an old man, relates the following story. At one time living in the easterly part of the state, he states that he started out, went five miles in a boat, then walked one mile to the fishing grounds. He commenced to fish and when he got through he had trout weighing all the way from 1 1/2 to 5 pounds to the amount of 500 pounds, which he put into two sacks and carried them to his boat.
